AMERICAN INVENTOR PARTICIPANT COMES TO SOUTHLAKE OKTOBERFEST!

Southlake, Texas –

Michael Osayi, participant 5299 on reality TV show American Inventor, is taking a break from the show's tough judges and trying his idea out on the welcoming shoppers at Southlake Oktoberfest instead. Osayi is showcasing his innovative game called Scramblers 10. The game is currently available as a board game and as a CD-Rom, with the book, cube and Braille versions on the drawing board.

Crediting his parents for providing him with the value of hard work, he's putting everything into making this dream a reality. Osayi said, "My dad always said I should not be afraid of hard work which will eventually lead to success. I already live the American dream in every sense of the word."

He recalls how nervous and scared he was to go in front of the judges at American Inventor, in fear of them shooting down his dream. "On a chilly Sunday morning in the great city of Houston, I was one of over 2000 people in line to record a date with history, as the second installment of the American Inventor's audition was about to begin." Osayi wrote a book called Two Minutes on the World Stage describing his experience on American Inventor in detail. He compares his time in front of the judges as "the biggest job interview of your life."

Osayi will be one of many great vendors at this year's Oktoberfest, a three-day arts and crafts festival presented by Grapevine Chrysler Jeep Dodge taking place October 5 through 7 at Southlake Town Square.
